January 1995

Arlington County is an urban county of about 26 square miles located directly across the Potomac River from Washington, DC. No incorporated towns or cities lie within Arlington's boundaries. Originally part of the ten-mile square surveyed in 1791 for the Nation's Capital, the portion on the west bank of the Potomac River was returned to the Commonwealth of Virginia by the U.S. Congress in 1846. This area was known as Alexandria City and Alexandria County until 1920, when the County portion was renamed Arlington County.

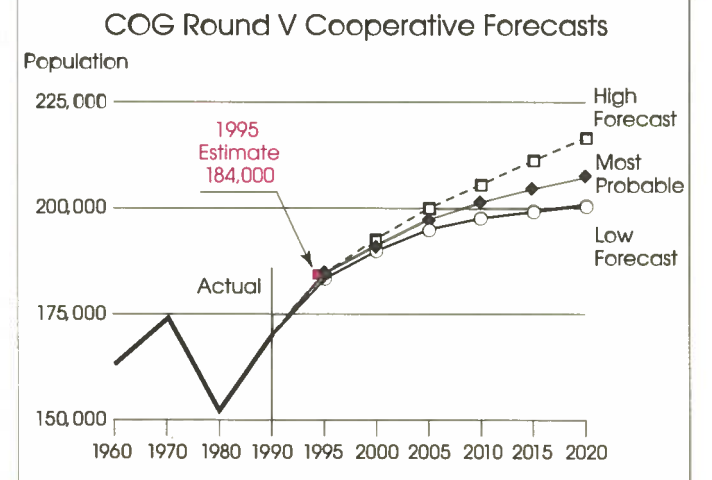

Although perhaps best known to visitors as the home of the Pentagon and Arlington National Cemetery, Arlington has maintained high-quality residential neighborhoods while supporting well-managed growth. The County's central location in the Washington metropolitan area, its ease of access by car and Metrorail, and its high quality labor force, have attracted an increasingly varied employment and residential mix. The County has focused high-density commercial and residential development around Metrorail stations in the Rosslyn-Ballston Corridor and in the Jefferson Davis Corridor, which includes Pentagon City and Crystal City, while maintaining lower-density development in the remainder. Arlington's population, among the most highly educated in the nation, is increasingly diverse; one in five residents is foreign-born, and one in four speak a language other than English at home.

Arlington is both a residential community and an employment center. The County had a population of 184,000 as of January 1, 1995, and is among the most densely populated jurisdictions in the country. Arlington is also home to one in five Northern Virginia jobs. Government employment, largely federal, comprises nearly 40% of the County's jobs. Additionally, services make up almost 30% of employment. As Arlington continued to emerge from the recent recession, its unemployment rate fell from an average of 4.2% in 1993 to 3.4% in 1994, maintaining the County's historically low rates within the region.

Arlington's office and commercial markets have more than doubled in size since 1980, bringing the current inventory of private office and commercial space to 37.1 million square feet and greatly expanding the County's tax base. As of January 1995, Arlington's real property tax base was nearly evenly divided between commercial and residential properties, enabling the County to maintain the lowest property tax rate in the Washington region, at $0.897 per $100 of assessed value. A total of 372,000 square feet of office space was absorbed in 1994, resulting in a year-end vacancy rate of 6.2 percent.
